PLUNGE DOWN FLIGHT OF STAIRS MAY PROVE FATAL

Bruce Furnier Sustains Severe Injuries in Fall

SKULL FRACTURED AT BASE Hospital Attendants Fear Hurts About Head May Cause Death

Falling down a flight of stairs leading from second floor to the street in the Piper building on Fallowfield avenue, Saturday night, Bruce Furnier, aged 35 of California, was probably fatally hurt. He sustained severe injuries about the head and according to Dr. J. K. Smith, and attendants at the Memorial Hospital, Monongahela, where the young man was taken, had the base of his skull fractured. He had not regained consciousness this morning.

Mr. Furnier had come from California in the evening to have some dental work done by Dr. J. W. Manon. Early in the evening he went to Dr. Manon's office, but found the dentist engaged with other work. An appointment was made for a later hour and about 9 o'clock Furnier again returned.

Meanwhile Dr. Manon had finished the work in which he was engaged, and stepped out on the street a moment. Finding him out, Furnier started out to await his return, and at the top of the steps tripped and plunged headlong. Hearing the noise of the man falling people from the store below hastened to see what had happened and found Furnier lying at the bottom of the steps, blood flowing from his ear.

The injured man was carried back to Dr. Manon's office, and Dr. J. K. Smith called in attendance. On the 11 o'clock car he was taken to the Memorial Hospital at Monongahela. Furnier is well known in this vicinity. He has lived at California for some time and is married.

Adult Classes Plan for County Sunday School Session

Nothing further than to report action taken by the Ministerial Association several days ago on the matter of holding evangelistic services was done at the meeting of the Adult Federated Classes Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Another meeting will be held about two weeks at which time the matter may be taken up further. This meeting is called for the special purpose of considering the matter of attending the Washington County Sunday school convention to be held in Canonsburg the week of June 18.

It is probable that the Charleroi district will be largely represented at the convention on Adult's Day, June 23. A committee was appointed Sunday to ascertain what rates could be secured for transportation and to look after plans for attending the convention. A report will be made two weeks hence at the called meeting.

County Commissioner Thomas Hill and Col. A. H. Anderson of Venetia were in town Sunday.

MINERS OF VALLEY PLAN TO HOLD BIG OUTING ON JUNE 28

National Mine Officials to be Here to Make Addresses—Mines Along Entire Valley to be Closed For Affair

Plans for holding the biggest miners' picnic ever known in this valley are being made by mining men of the districts surrounding this vicinity. The affair will be held at Eldora Park, midway between Monongahela and Charleroi, on June 28. National and district officers of the Miners' union will be present and make addresses.

The outing will be held under the auspices of the Black Diamond local, of which many hundred men are members, but co-operating with them on arrangements are miners from along the Monongahela valley, and back in the country of Marianna and Ellsworth.

John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, will head the national officers who will be present that day. He will make an address. President Francis Feehan of the Pittsburgh district, and Timothy Donovan, secretary-treasurer, will be present and make addresses.

Special trains will be run to Charleroi and Monongahela, it is expected. All the mines north as far as Elizabeth and south as far as Rices Landing will be closed for the event. A program of sports will be arranged. Two bands will be engaged to enliven the occasion.

"Scissors" McIlvaine Twirls Good Ball and His Team Hits Readily

HOW IT ALL OCCURED

With McIlvaine pitching great ball throughout, and the team in back of him hitting when hits counted, the Charleroi Independents won from the pretty one, with the majority of the scores being brought around in the fifth inning.

The first thing the visitors did when they came to bat in the first inning was to get a run. Shellady second up got soaked in the ribs and came around on a single to right. In the third McIlvaine scored the first run for his team. He hit out a twagger and went to second on a base on balls. On a life he went third, and then while Joe Mason was busy stealing second, Mac took the bit in his teeth and stole home. On hits by Mathers, J. Mason, Kuhn

Pittsburg Woman Claims He Promised to Marry Her and Failed

Fannie and Matt are out. His calls have ceased and tender missives no more pass between them. He has asked her to return the engagement ring and says he will never marry her. Naturally Fannie is aggravated as she says she has always been ready and willing to marry Matt.

These are among the facts recited in a breach of promise suit filed last week by Fannie Dolmae of Pittsburg, against Matt Lesrtz, of Charleroi. She asks for $5,000 damages in the Washington County courts by reason of the refusal of the defendant to carry out a solemn promise to be married, which she alleges she and the defendant entered into.

Detective Sarver was over from Washington Saturday and Lesrtz was arrested. He gave bond of $1,000 for his appearance.

ISSUE IS APPROVED BY COURT

Plan for Improvement of Highways Meets With Favor

Final decrees have been signed by the court approving absolutely the action taken by the May grand jury in approving for improvements a number of roads of the county and also giving to the commissioners the authority to issue bonds in the sum of $500,000 for road improvements.

Last Monday was the last day for filing exceptions to the action of the grand jury but none were filed, and Solicitor Baum had the final decrees prepared and has now presented them to the court. This means that the matter is now up to the controller and county commissioners.

It is likely that the controller and commissioners will at once prepare to issue the bonds and negotiate their sale. Commissioner Berry said this week that he was in favor of going ahead at once and selling these bonds and not delaying the improvement of all these roads as authorized. Preparations for advertising for bids for the improvement of these roads will also likely be made at once. Bids may be received and tabulated but the commissioners can defer letting the contracts until the bonds are sold.

Railroad Troubles Grow Serious--Woman is Shot

FOUR MEN BEING HELD Arrested and Taken Before Justice on Charge of Rioting

Four men charged with rioting will have to answer in court to their alleged misdeeds as the result of trouble Saturday night at West Brownsville between striking shopmen and Pennsylvania railroad employees. Mrs. Michael Sonick, aged 35 who was shot at the beginning of the disturbance at the West Brownsville yards, is at the Mercy Hospital, Pittsburg, suffering from a wound through her left breast. She was the wife of one of the men who is still in the employ of the company, and it is stated kept boarders, among them being a number of the strike-breakers. Her condition is serious, but she will probably recover.

It is stated that the disturbance began in the neighborhood of the Sonick house. More than 50 strikers, it is said stood on the river bank there and occasionally threw stones into the yard to scare strike-breakers. Near midnight when two detectives of the railroad company accompanied a call boy on his trip to make calls, shots and stones began to fly. A short time afterward, reinforced by a number of deputies, the railroad officers in enforcing order gave battle to the mob of 100 or so that had in the meantime collected. From 11 o'clock until about 4 hostilities reigned and a number of shots were fired, but no one was hurt.

Mrs. Sonick apparently was leaning out of the window of her home when she was shot. She was sent to the hospital, as soon as possible. She is the mother of a five months' old baby.

Michael Forlich, a former shopman, "Nig" Gregor, John Carr, John Smith and Charles Thomas were arrested by the deputies for rioting. They were taken to Monongahela Sunday morning and information entered against them. This morning they were given their hearings. Thomas was discharged but the rest placed under $500 bail for court. Forlich has a much bruised face and head received during the mele.

SUSTAINING THE PRESIDENT.

United States Senator Boise Penrose has notified his Pennsylvania constituents that the outlook for President Taft's reciprocity agreement is brighter now than it has been since it was originally introduced.

The President and Senator Penrose have combined their forces in advancing the proposed Canadian agreement. The two are working together, hand in hand, to promote the measure and both have been cheered with the confidence that they will have enough votes to carry the agreement
when the vote is taken probably early next week.

None of the many proposed changes in the agreement has met with general favor as yet, and some broached with vigor early in the discussion have been dropped as lacking support. Representatives of the farming element continue to urge reasons for its non passage, but this show of organized opposition is aimed at the agreement as a whole. They would kill it outright, and on that account their fight has less chance of success than if they sought its amendment only.

It is of course gratifying to know that the chances are good for the reciprocity pact, but it is particularly pleasing to realize that the President has found his most substantial support in the Republican leadership of the Keystone State.

his reciprocity measure will be passed

PICKED UP IN PASSING

Logan Waller Page, director of the United States office of Public Roads states that $1,000,000 a day is the record that will be established this season throughout the United States as the expenditure for improving and maintaining public roads. Never has there been such interest in the improvement of highways, and with the Legislatures appropriating millions for this purpose, the good roads movement has received its greatest impetus.

Every State in the Union seems at last to be thoroughly aroused to the benefits derived from investments in improved highways. In California the State has issued $18,000,000 in bonds to build a system of State highways. In Connecticut about $2-250,000 will be expended this year for trunk line and State-aid roads.
Of the $5,000,000 bond issue recently authorized in Maryland over $1,250-000 will be available this year. Masachusetts will expend over $1,000,000.

It is expected that at least $5,000-000 will be expended on State-aid roads and on trunk-line systems in the State of New York in addition to $7,000,000 already raised by local taxation. More money is being devoted to road improvement in New York than in any other State and the percentage of improved roads in that State has increased from 7.9 per cent in 1904 to 60 per cent in 1909.

Over $2,000,000 is available in North Carolina from bond issues in the various counties and the Legislature has authorized the construction of a road from the Atlantic Ocean to the Tennessee line, 425 miles.

In 1910 30 counties in Ohio voted $2,500,000 in bonds to be expended this year. Ohio will also expend about $500,000 from State revenues.
In Pennsylvania the State-aid appropriation will amount to over $1,000-000 and a $50,000,000 bond issue is being considered. Various counties in Tennessee will expend $1,500,000 from bond issues. Over $1,500,000 will be expended from bond issues in various counties in Texas. In Virginia $2,500,000 has been authorized by various counties, to be expended this year, while over $250,000 has been appropriated in Wisconsin.

The prospect for a complete system of public roads throughout the United States is better now than ever before, and a uniformity of good roads laws gives promise that this country will eventually take its place with France in having the most sensible system of road supervision and maintenance.

Ancient Rome's Libraries.

The libraries of ancient Rome were immense and splendid. Lucullus, whose name is associated with table
luxuries, expended much of his wealth
on books. His library, says Plutarch, had "walks, galleries and cabinets
open to all visitors." Julius Caesar proposed to open this library definitely to the public.

How were these vast libraries, in addition to the book shops, filled?
With his trained staff of readers and transcribers, a publisher could turn out an edition of any work at very cheap rates, and almost at a moment's notice. There was no initial expense of typesetting before a single copy
could be produced, no ruinous extras
in the shape of printers' corrections.
The manuscript came from the author; the publisher handed it over to his slaves, and if a book of modest dimensions, the complete edition could be ready, if necessary, within twenty-four hours. Actually, then, books were produced and sold more easily and quickly in ancient Rome than they are in modern London.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

The "Iliad" Not a Myth.

The fall of Troy after a ten year
siege by the Grecian princes about 1154
B. C. has long been considered as a rather mythical foundation for Homer's immortal epic, the "Iliad." But in 1870 the excavations of Schliemann on the ruined site of Troy brought to light
under the ashes of two superincumbent fortress cities the remains answering to the descriptions of Homer and a hidden vault containing goblets, bowls,
vases, gems, jewels, armor de luxe
and like articles in gold, silver and bronze.
These treasures are now generally acknowledged to be the veritable remnants of the once vast riches of Priam,
which, although depleted by ten years of costly warfare in the purchase of supplies and mercenaries and the final sack of the ruined city, were thus preserved to enrich the museums of Europe and greatly increase our realization of the wealth and art of that ancient Ilium, which we have hitherto been disposed to consider a poet's dream.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

Mark Antony's Mistake.

At a performance of "Julius Caesar"
at Hurst college, England, Mark Antony made a mistake when the dead body of Caesar was brought in. He apostrophized the fallen hero with impassioned eloquence, and the audience felt acutely for the poor citizens, who were all presumably horror struck and overcome with grief, when Antony gently, but firmly, grasped, as he thought, the face cloth and slowly, very slowly, began to draw it back. Just then an excited whisper came from the other end of the corpse. "This end, you fool!" But Antony was inexorably wrapped in grief. He persevered and disclosed to the intently gazing audience Julius Caesar's boots.

The Mandarin's Robe.
The author of "Recollections of a Society Clairvoyant" tells of the case of a lady who was haunted by reason of a garment she wore. It was a mandarin's robe from China, stated to be part of the loot from the sack of Peking. The owner, who lived in a flat in a London suburb, first began to be alarmed by "a smell of decomposition in her bedroom" and heard stealthy footsteps padding along the passage in and out of the sitting room." She changed her house, but the obsession continued. The dreadful smell recurred, her cats died in great agony from some unknown cause, and uncanny footsteps were heard at night. According to the clairvoyant's diagnosis, the robe had belonged to "a man who had worn it when he engaged in the mystic forms of ceremonial magic known to the Chinese. He had met with a violent death, and certain malignant forces were still imprisoned in his robe, which, from the bloodstains on it, he must have been wearing when he was killed." The curse was eventually dispelled by the robe being burned.

Ruskin and the Champion Bore.

One of the principal clubs in Pall Mall has the misfortune to be frequented by a gentleman who is by common consent the greatest bore and buttonholer in London. Some years ago this good man, on his return from his autumn holiday, was telling all his acquaintances at the club that he had been occupying a house at the lakes not far from Mr. Ruskin, who,
he added, was in a very melancholy
state.

"I am truly sorry for that," said one of his hearers. "What is the matter with him?"

"Well," replied the buttonholer, "I was walking one day in the lane which separated Ruskin's house from mine,
and I saw him coming down the lane toward me. The moment he caught sight of me he darted into a wood which was close by and hid behind a tree till I had passed. Oh, very sad indeed!"—From "Collections and Re-

Clean Your Glasses.

The most scientifically fitted glasses in the world will do more harm than good unless they are properly kept and correctly worn. It is a strong statement to make, but most people wear dirty glasses, even those who are fastidiously careful in all other respects.
Peering through any clouded and uncertain window is a strain upon the vision. How much more must the strain be when the window is so close to the eye that it is almost a part of it!
Glasses must be worn at the exact angle for which they were prescribed and no other. For this reason many people and all children do better in spectacles than in eyeglasses. The glasses should be fitted to the eye by the optician, after which care should be taken not to handle and loosen the frame. If this occurs in the slightest degree they should again be fitted and tightened.—Youth's Companion.

A Mountain In the Sky.

Somewhere many miles away from this earth an enormous mountain twenty miles high is flying through space. The mountain is known astro-nomically as the planet Eros. The ordinary man has long taken it for granted that all the planets are more or less round in shape. The small planet Eros, however, is an exception to this rule. According to the latest astronomical information, it is a mere mountain in space, "without form and void," and as it turns upon its axis first one corner and then another is presented to view. These small worlds (few are over ten or twenty miles across) are not large enough to have sufficient gravity to draw their structure into symmetry and remain as when launched into space—mammoth meteorites. A tantalizing fact for astronomers is that Eros passed very close to us about Jan. 24, 1894—before the planet was recognized—and that quite so near an approach is not due again till 1975.

Seeing Is Doubting.

"Seeing is believing, eh?" said an oculist. "Well, no saw was ever more absurd than that. You see a horse's head and a flour barrel, and you believe the barrel is longer than the horse's head, don't you? Well, it isn't.
The horse's head from the tips of his ears to the end of his nose is longer than the barrel by a considerable distance. Architects have to deceive the eye in order to make it appear that their buildings are symmetrical.
They make walls lean in that they may appear vertical. They make windows wider at the top. They make columns thicker in the middle than at the summit or base. And the top lines of a building, in order to appear plumb to the silly eye of man, must be raised up quite a lot in the center.
"Seeing is believing, indeed!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Apple Pie Without Apples.

A guest at an old fashioned home dinner was eulogizing apple pie and her hostess when another guest, who had been a California pioneer, recalled the "apple" pie given the children of 1852 to appease their homesick cravings when apples were a dollar a pound. It was made by breaking four soda crackers into an earthen bowl and pouring over them a pint of cold water rendered very tart by citric acid. When soft the crackers were laid on a pie plate on the undercrust.
Over them were sifted two table-spoonsful of light brown sugar and a little allspice and cinnamon. A pretty perforated top crust was added, and in a few minutes a perfect apple pie was taken from the oven to delight young and old.—New York Sun.

Care With Mushrooms.
It is not generally known that mushrooms on account of the amount of nitrogen they contain approach nearer to animal food than many other vegetable products. An analysis made by Professor Attwood shows that mushrooms contain 3.5 per cent proteins, boiled potatoes 2.5 and onions 1.6.
Experts say that mushrooms should be eaten perfectly fresh and never eaten after repeating or being "warmed over." One of the extensive mushroom farmers in England says that persons subject to rheumatic and gouty attacks should abstain from mushrooms and that liquor should not be drunk at a meal where mushrooms
are served.—New York World.

OWES HER HEALTH

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family. I tell them of my good friend, your Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.
"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls to build them up and make them strong and well. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has always helped her.
"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Lydia E.
Pinkham's Remedies. I tell everyone
I meet that I owe my health and happiness to these wonderful medicines."
—Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich.,

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com-

ful drugs, and to-day holds the record

BASEBALL SIGNS.

Their Importance Is Much Greater Than Their Number.

Among the players we do not use the word "signal." With us it is a "sign." There are not as many "signs" used on a ball club as the public would believe. Of course the catcher must "sign" the pitcher for every ball that he throws. That is to prevent confusion or, as we say, to keep from "crossing each other." The catcher has a sign for a curve ball, a fast ball and a slow one. To ball players all curve balls, such as the drop and the outcurve, are called "a curve." The catcher gives the same sign for any one of them. We do not call a ball that jumps "in" a curve. Ball players do not recognize the incurve. That is called a fast ball. Any ball thrown by a right handed pitcher with sufficient speed will jump inward to a slight degree. The outcurve and drop are unnatural curves, and the ball must be spun in an unnatural manner to get that peculiar "break."

The only other "sign" of importance is the one the batter gives to the runner when he intends to hit the ball. If he wants the runner to start as he swings (the hit and run play) he gives him a certain sign. There are any number of signs used for this play. Sometimes the batter gives it by rubbing his hand over the small end of the bat. Again, he may give it by knocking the dust from his shoes with the big end of the bat.—John J. McGraw in Metropolitan Magazine.

EAST INDIAN RUNNERS.

Kahars Who Can Regularly Make a Hundred Miles a Day.

Ordinary Marathon races seem rather insignificant compared with the regular performances of a certain east Indian caste. These Kahars, also known as Jhinwarh, live in the Punjab, where for centuries they have acted as runners, fishermen and water fowl catchers.

The men are trained runners and are said to be able to go a hundred miles a day without resting. According to Bally's Magazine, there is a well authenticated instance that Tika Ram, the son of Lalu Ram, carried dispatches 300 miles in three days—from Meerut.

The point discussed, however, is whether the normal exertions of the Kahar post runners and the similar exertions of Jhinwarh men shortened their lives, and it appears that the Kahars, trained from childhood to be distance runners, live to be old men. They are not only able to withstand the strain of running great distances under a heavy load, but thrive under it.

The Jhinwarh man, too, notwithstanding his irregular diet, excessive use of liquor and exposure to the elements, lives to a reasonable age. In Tokyo when a census was taken of the Jhinwarh men a few years ago there were found to be more than 1,300 who were over fifty-five years of age.

Sailing Is So Interesting.

The lady was reading a nautical novel. She struggled along bravely for a few minutes, but finally had to appeal to her husband.

"Gerald," she said, "the author says that the boat was sailing 'wing and wing.' What does that mean? I've been on a yacht, but I never heard that before."

"That means," answered Gerald, rejoicing in the fact that he, too, had spent several hours on a sailing vessel—"that means that the schooner had her mains' out to port and her fores' out to starboard, or vice versa."

"Oh, I see," cried the lady. It's just like a chicken—a wing on each side. And now I understand why they call those little sails in the middle 'jibs.' It's short for 'jiblets,' of course. Isn't sailing interesting?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ancient Architecture.

Herr Knauth, the architect in charge of the Cathedral of Strassburg, has shown that the principles of construction followed by the great cathedral builders of former times are identical with those used by the builders of the Egyptian pyramids and are based on triangulation. The same simple geometrical figure underlies all these constructions. More than this, Herr Knauth traces the architectural principle in the formation of crystals and lays down this formula: "The laws of proportion in medieval architecture are the geometrical laws of crystallization."

Cause of the Delay.

"Why is your friend staying so long in New York?"
"I don't know—haven't heard which of the two reasons is keeping him."

"Which of the two?"
"Yes, whether he is having too good a time to come away or has spent all his money and can't get away."—Buffalo Express.

Chronio.

"One thing about Jinx, he never comes into one's office without knocking."

"Another thing about Jinx is that he never goes anywhere without knocking."—Houston Post.

Self.

A perfect understanding of self is a perfect understanding of all things, for man is the condensed whole. From such a man no power is withheld. All things are obedient to him.—Freedom.

Life, upon the whole, is far more pleasurable than painful; otherwise we would not feel pain so impatiently when it comes.—Leigh Hunt.

First Flying Ambulances.

A valued servant and friend of the great Napoleon, Dominique Larrey, first established that system of "flying ambulances" which carried the wounded to the rear almost as soon as disabled. The staff numbered about 340 men with four heavy and twelve light two and four wheeled ambulances to each division. Napoleon reviewed this arm of the service with the greatest interest and once exclaimed to Larrey: "Your work is one of the most important conceptions of our age. It will suffice for your reputation." For the Egyptian campaign Larrey secured the services of 800 qualified surgeons in addition to the regular force. At Alexandria General Figueres was severely wounded, and on his recovery wished to present Napoleon with a splendid Damascus saber. "Yes," said the emperor, "I accept in order to give it the surgeon in chief, by whose exertions your life has been spared." This saber, engraved with the words "Aboukir" and "Larrey," was taken from the great surgeon by the Prussians at Waterloo.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

The Horrors of Thirst.

In the oasis of Mogara, says L. Dow Corington in the Wide World Magazine, we had a first experience of the desert traveler's great enemy—thirst. We were seated in front of a Bedouin chief's tent, our two baby camels enjoying their first drink of water since they had left Cairo, when, from across a sand dune, a Bedouin came staggering and tottering toward us. His eyes were bloodshot, his lips twice their natural size, while his tongue, blue and dry, hung out of his mouth. Evidently he had lost himself, had wandered around for days in search of water and had stumbled upon the oasis in the very nick of time. To allow him to drink would have been his death. In spite of his frantic struggles, he was held by four men, while a fifth allowed a few drops of water to trickle down his throat. It was as though he were a red-hot boiler which would have to be allowed to cool off before being filled if an accident was to be avoided.

Objected to Publicity.

Old Brother Brown had been approached several times by the colored deacons of his church and asked to pay his church dues. He had promised to "pay up" just as soon as he sold a calf which he owned. Several months later he sold the calf. The next Sunday morning at service the congregation sang the old familiar hymn: The half has never been told Of life so full and free.

Brother Brown, somewhat deaf and conscious of his failure to pay his dues, understood the words to be: The calf has never been sold. But when it's sold he'll pay.

When the hymn was finished the old colored man, very indignant, arose and said:

"Bredren and sistahs, I has sold dat calf and heh's yo' ten dollahs! But I didn't ca' about de whole chur'ch singin' about it."—National Monthly.

A Costly Tuft of Feathers.

On the apex of the crown worn by the Prince of Wales on special occasions is a curious feather, or, rather, tuft of feathers, the top of which is adorned with a gold thread. The value of this feather is estimated at $50,000, and it has the distinction of being the only one of its kind in human possession. Twenty years passed after the first hunter set out to procure the feather before it was attained, and during that period more than a dozen hunters had lost their lives in the quest. The costly tuft is of periwak feathers, and the extraordinary danger incurred in procuring it was due to the fact that the periwak, for some unknown reason, is to be found only in dense jungles in which tigers make their lair.—Chicago Tribune.

Turning the Turtle.

Turtle hunting is not without excitement. The method of capture consists of the simple act of turning the turtle on its back. Once in this position it is quite helpless. Its only defense is to cover its cap with sand thrown up by the powerful front legs or flippers. These are brought into action in an instant, and woe betide the captor who has his eyes and mouth open at the moment, for the sand is hurled with great force. When turned over the captive is dragged up the beach to above high water mark, and this is no easy task, for it weighs about four hundredweight.

Premeditated.

"And why do you claim that it was with malice aforethought that the automobile defendant ran down the complainant?"

"On the morning it happened, your honor, I heard him say that he was going to take out his new auto and see if he could not run across a few people he knew."—Houston Post.

A Giddy Girl.

"Is your daughter of a practical turn of mind?"

"No; she is very frivolous. Wants to take cooking lessons instead of perfecting her game of bridge."—Exchange.

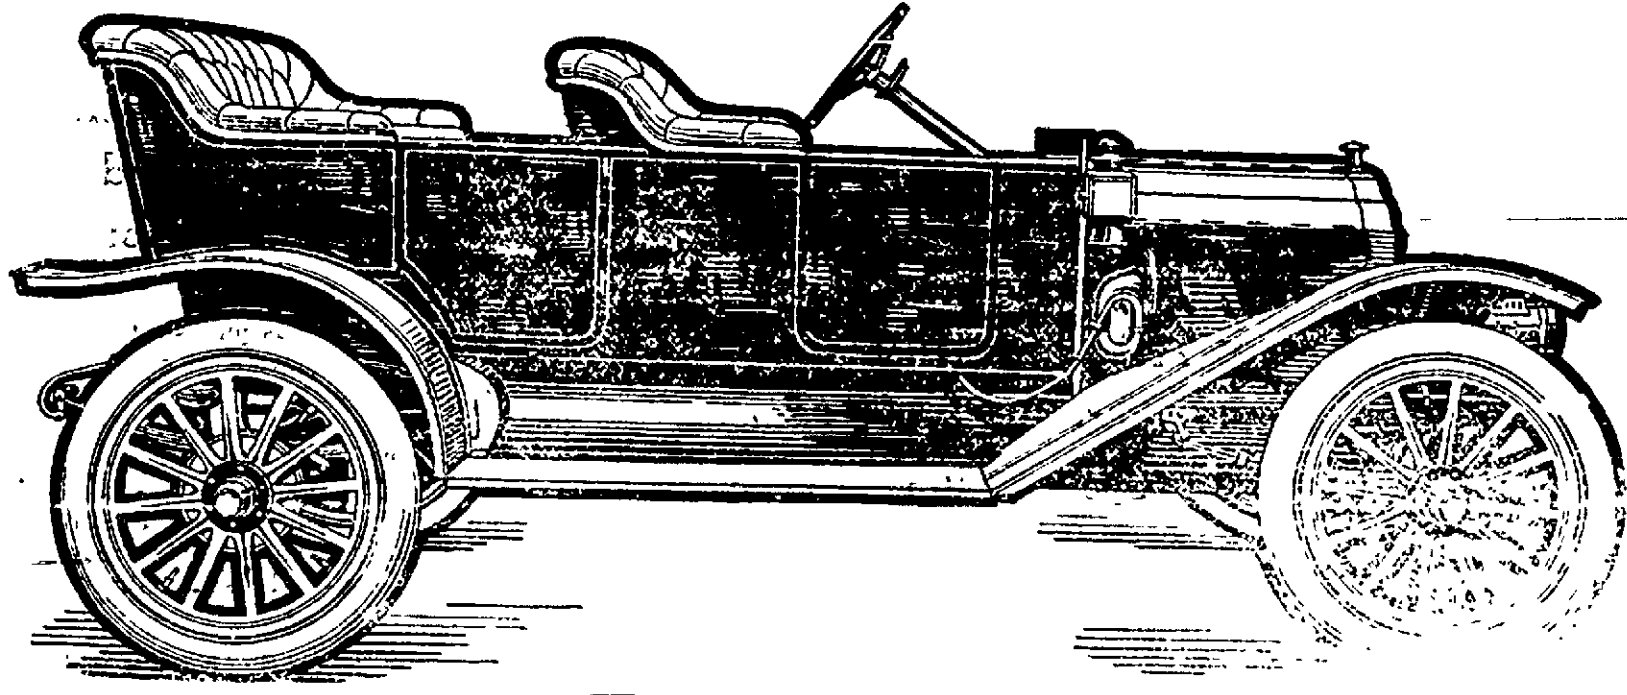

His Honest Face.

"Anyway, he has an honest face."
"Honest? You surprise me."
"Yes; it's the only honest thing about him. It shows how dishonest he really is."—Life.

Shopping For a Railroad.

Strict economy in buying is the only qualification that can insure a position as shopper for a railroad.

"The woman who can be talked into paying a cent more a yard for cotton or woolen goods than is absolutely necessary need never apply for the job," said a woman who holds a railroad job. "It is my business to buy clothes for people who have been injured on our road. Pending recovery the road pays all expenses, and when patients are ready to leave the hospital they are provided with a complete set of clothing, even to rubber overshoes. Unless the patients are unreasonable in their demands we provide the kind of clothes they ask for, and no doubt many of them leave the hospital better dressed than they have ever been in their lives. Since those outfits have to be duplicated a good many times in the course of the year it is obvious that needless extravagance cannot be tolerated. The railroad insists upon purchasing all supplies, and it is imperative that the woman who does the buying knows to a thread the kind of material she wants and what she ought to pay for it."—New York Sun.

Toothless Saws.

Toothless saws have been in use cutting armor plate for a number of years. The theory of the action is abrasion by local fusion, due to the very high speed of the disk, causing so many thousand inches of surface to impinge on the metal undercut that the material acted upon is heated at the point of contact to a temperature approaching, if not equal to, the fusing point. It appears as if a very small portion of the metal being cut immediately in the neighborhood of the point of contact is first melted and at once rubbed off, thus exposing a fresh surface to the frictional action, and that this process goes on continuously while the disk is working. The temperature of the disk must necessarily be much lower than the work in contact with it, owing to its large surface area, and when it is considered that all the frictional energy of the rotating disk is concentrated on an extremely small area of contact in the material subjected to its action the results obtained are not so surprising as appear at first sight.—Thomas R. Shaw in Cassier's Magazine.

Home Only In Name.

A young teacher who has substituted in the lower districts of the city tells this little story of one of her pupils:

There had been an entertainment at the school at which the child had received a picture from the principal. The next day the little girl appeared with the picture under her arm. Quite regretfully she laid it upon the teacher's desk.

"Mom says thank you for the picture," she imparted, drawing up her ragged little form, "but we ain't got no wall to hang it on."

"No wall?" cried the horrified young substitute. "Why, Molly, what do you mean?"

"There's five families of us in our room," Molly explained carelessly, "and we live in the middle."—Philadelphia Times.

The Bloodletting Branch.

Not every pun is as good as one credited to a Dublin gentleman of long ago by the author of a book entitled "In Many Lands." George IV., on his visit to Dublin in 1821, met at a reception Sir Philip Crampton, Ireland's greatest surgeon.

"In what branch of the service is that magnificent looking man?" asked his majesty.

The gentleman to whom the question was put was too polite to hint that the king was mistaken in supposing that the distinguished surgeon was a naval or military officer.

"Sire," he replied, "he is a general in the lancets."

AN ILL MATED PAIR.

Wide Apart in Temperament Were Thomas and Jane Carlyle.

That the Carlyles were an ill assorted couple no one could deny. She was a highly strung, nervous woman, very quick, able and impatient, disappointed with her married life and her position, jealous of the admiration which Carlyle received at the hands of all his admirers, especially of one or two women, whom she found very unsympathetic.

That Carlyle adored her there is little doubt. He loved her with all the rough, passionate power of his nature, but he was a peasant in manner and character and lacking in all the little outward signs of devotion and affection which so many women exact and the absence of which they resent most bitterly.

Mrs. Carlyle found herself tied to an irritable genius who, sensitive at every point, deeply devoted to her, but absolutely incapable of translating that love into the language which she craved and longed for. I remember her once saying to me in a bitter way, "My dear, whatever you do, never marry a philosopher," and that was the key to the enigma—the woman always hungering for proofs of the devotion in which the whole of her daily life was wanting.—From Lady St. Heller's "Memories."

Physiognomy Not Reliable.

I am a profound disbeliever in physiognomy. Features are false witnesses. Stupidity frequently wears a mask of intelligence. I know business men who look like poets and poets who look like business men. Men of genius invariably look like idiots, and if you pick out the man who looks most eminent in a party you are sure to find he is a nobody. I always distrust men who look magnificent. Nature is a stingy creature. She seldom gives a man the double gift of being great and looking great. She took care to lame Byron and deform Pope and disfigure Johnson. But the crowning example of her jealous parsimony is Shakespeare. I have always been disappointed with Shakespeare's face. It does not live up to his poetry. It is dull, heavy and commonplace.

There's certainly something doing. "Scissors" McIlvaine batted at 500 per cent on Saturday. One of his hits was a double.

"Ling" Moffat, well known in college circles and minor leagues was stationed on second for the Lawrenceville team on Saturday.

Longo, Lawrenceville's crack shortstop, is a full blooded Indian.

Quaker Doctor in New Office

On McKean Avenue Between 5th and 6th Streets
Opposite Hotel Arthur

The Quaker Doctor is now located in his new offices on McKean avenue between Fifth and Sixth streets, directly opposite the Hotel Arthur and next door to where he is giving his free lectures and performances nightly.

On account of the delay in getting his office opened here in Charleroi, he gave two hours yesterday morning to working men and many of the holders of the consultation cards took advantage of this to call and get examination and advice from him without losing any time from their work. The Quaker says that Sundays with him is a day of rest as it is with most of us, but he is not sorry that he gave two hours yesterday for office work, and he could spare the time much easier than those to whom every hour means part of the weekly wage.

The Quaker says he has been received almost royally here and the enormous crowds that gather at lectures and free performances every night is the best proof in the world that people are recognizing the fact that everything connected with his exhibitions is moral and refined and worthy of patronage.

The shows which seem to improve with each performance are given by high class entertainers and without exaggeration, it is safe to say that they put to shame many that our people have paid fifty and seventy-five cents to see. Besides the various specialties he is giving one or more comedy acts now every night, and as a rule it is one continuous laugh from the time these acts start till they end.

He desires to state through these columns that every one calling at his office for consultation and advice must have one of the cards which are given out at the platform nightly with the remedies. He says if they did not have this rule, it would be utterly impossible to handle the crowds that would call at his office, among which would be a great many that would come merely out of idle curiosity and he wishes it understood his services are not for these, but for the sick and suffering that really need his services and the benefit of his years of active practice in medicine and surgery.

Bruce Furnier Sustains Severe Injuries in Fall

SKULL FRACTURED AT BASE

Hospital Attendants Fear Hurts About Head May Cause Death

Falling down a flight of stairs leading from second floor to the street in the Piper building on Fallowfield avenue, Saturday night, Bruce Furnier, aged 35 of California, was probably fatally hurt. He sustained severe injuries about the head and according to Dr. J. K. Smith, and attendants at the Memorial Hospital, Monongahela, where the young man was taken, had the base of his skull fractured. He had not regained consciousness this morning.

Mr. Furnier had come from California in the evening to have some dental work done by Dr. J. W. Manon. Early in the evening he went to Dr. Manon's office, but found the dentist engaged with other work. An appointment was made for a later hour and about 9 o'clock Furnier again returned.

Meanwhile Dr. Manon had finished the work in which he was engaged, and stepped out on the street a moment. Finding him out, Furnier started out to await his return, and at the top of the steps tripped and plunged headlong. Hearing the noise of the man falling people from the store below hastened to see what had happened and found Furnier lying at the bottom of the steps, blood flowing from his ear.

The injured man was carried back to Dr. Manon's office, and Dr. J. K. Smith called in attendance. On the 11 o'clock car he was taken to the Memorial Hospital at Monongahela. Furnier is well known in this vicinity. He has lived at California for some time and is married.

The outing will be held under the auspices of the Black Diamond local, of which many hundred men are members, but co-operating with them on arrangements are miners from along the Monongahela valley, and back in the country of Marianna and Ellsworth.

John F. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, will head the national officers who will be present that day. He will make an address. President Francis Peehan of the Pittsburgh district, and Timothy Donovan, secretary-treasurer, will be present and make addresses.

"Scissors" McIlvaine Twirls Good Ball and His Team Hits Readily

HOW IT ALL OCCURED

With McIlvaine pitching great ball throughout, and the team in back of him hitting when hits counted, the Charleroi Independents won from the pretty one, with the majority of the scores being brought around in the fifth inning.

The first thing the visitors did when they came to bat in the first inning was to get a run. Shellady second up got soaked in the ribs and came around on a single to right. In the third McIlvaine scored the first run for his team. He hit out a twagger and went to second on a base on balls. On a life he went third, and then while Joe Mason was busy stealing second, Mac took the bit in his teeth and stole home.

Pittsburg Woman Claims He Promised to Marry Her and Failed

Fannie and Matt are out. His calls have ceased and tender missives no more pass between them. He has asked her to return the engagement ring and says he will never marry her. Naturally Fanny is aggravated as she says she has always been ready and willing to marry Matt.

These are among the facts recited in a breach of promise suit filed last week by Fannie Dolmae of Pittsburg, against Matt Lesztz, of Charleroi. She asks for $5,000 damages in the Washington County courts by reason of the refusal of the defendant to carry out a solemn promise to be married, which she alleges she and the defendant entered into.

Detective Sarver was over from Washington Saturday and Lesztz was arrested. He gave bond of $1,000 for his appearance.

ISSUE IS APPROVED BY COURT

Plan for Improvement of Highways Meets With Favor

Final decrees have been signed by the court approving absolutely the action taken by the May grand jury in approving for improvements a number of roads of the county and also giving to the commissioners the authority to issue bonds in the sum of $500,000 for road improvements.

Last Monday was the last day for filing exceptions to the action of the grand jury but none were filed, and Solicitor Baum had the final decrees prepared and has now presented them to the court. This means that the matter is now up to the controller and county commissioners.

It is likely that the controller and commissioners will at once prepare to issue the bonds and negotiate their sale. Commissioner Berry said this week that he was in favor of going ahead at once and selling these bonds and not delaying the improvement of all these roads as authorized. Preparations for advertising for bids for the improvement of these roads will also likely be made at once. Bids may be received and tabulated but the commissioners can defer letting the contracts until the bonds are sold.

Railroad Troubles Grow Serious--Woman is Shot

FOUR MEN BEING HELD

Arrested and Taken Before Justice on Charge of Rioting

Four men charged with rioting will have to answer in court to their alleged misdeeds as the result of trouble Saturday night at West Brownsville between striking shopmen and Pennsylvania railroad employees. Mrs. Michael Sonick, aged 35 who was shot at the beginning of the disturbance at the West Brownsville yards, is at the Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh, suffering from a wound through her left breast. She was the wife of one of the men who is still in the employ of the company, and it is stated kept boarders, among them being a number of the strike-breakers. Her condition is serious, but she will probably recover.

It is stated that the disturbance began in the neighborhood of the Sonick house. More than 50 strikers, it is said stood on the river bank there and occasionally threw stones into the yard to scare strike-breakers. Near midnight when two detectives of the railroad company accompanied a call boy on his trip to make calls, shots and stones began to fly. A short time afterward, reinforced by a number of deputies, the railroad officers in enforcing order gave battle to the mob of 100 or so that had in the meantime collected. From 11 o'clock until about 4 hostilities reigned and a number of shots were fired, but no one was hurt.

Mrs. Sonick apparently was leaning out of the window of her home when she was shot. She was sent to the hospital, as soon as possible. She is the mother of a five months' old baby.

Michael Forlich, a former shopman, "Nig" Gregor, John Carr, John Smith and Charles Thomas were arrested by the deputies for rioting. They were taken to Monongahela Sunday morning and information entered against them. This morning they were given their hearings. Thomas was discharged but the rest placed under $500 bail for court. Forlich has a much bruised face and head received during the melee.

SUSTAINING THE PRESIDENT.

United States Senator Boise Penrose has notified his Pennsylvania constituents that the outlook for President Taft's reciprocity agreement is brighter now than it has been since it was originally introduced.

The President and Senator Penrose have combined their forces in advancing the proposed Canadian agreement. The two are working together, hand in hand, to promote the measure and both have been cheered with the confidence that they will have enough votes to carry the agreement when the vote is taken probably early next week.

None of the many proposed changes in the agreement has met with general favor as yet, and some broached with vigor early in the discussion have been dropped as lacking support. Representatives of the farming element continue to urge reasons for its non passage, but this show of organized opposition is aimed at the agreement as a whole. They would kill it outright, and on that account their fight has less chance of success than if they sought its amendment only.

It is of course gratifying to know that the chances are good for the reciprocity pact, but it is particularly pleasing to realize that the President has found his most substantial support in the Republican leadership of the Keystone State.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

Logan Waller Page, director of the United States office of Public Roads states that $1,000,000 a day is the record that will be established this season throughout the United States as the expenditure for improving and maintaining public roads. Never has there been such interest in the improvement of highways, and with the Legislatures appropriating millions for this purpose, the good roads movement has received its greatest impetus.

Every State in the Union seems at last to be thoroughly aroused to the benefits derived from investments in improved highways. In California the State has issued $18,000,000 in bonds to build a system of State highways. In Connecticut about $2,250,000 will be expended this year for trunk line and State-aid roads. Of the $5,000,000 bond issue recently authorized in Maryland over $1,250,000 will be available this year. Massachusetts will expend over $1,000,000.

It is expected that at least $5,000,000 will be expended on State-aid roads and on trunk-line systems in the State of New York in addition to $7,000,000 already raised by local taxation. More money is being devoted to road improvement in New York than in any other State and the percentage of improved roads in that State has increased from 7.9 per cent in 1904 to 60 per cent in 1909.

Over $2,000,000 is available in North Carolina from bond issues in the various counties and the Legislature has authorized the construction of a road from the Atlantic Ocean to the Tennessee line, 425 miles.

In 1910 30 counties in Ohio voted $2,500,000 in bonds to be expended this year. Ohio will also expend about $500,000 from State revenues. In Pennsylvania the State-aid appropriation will amount to over $1,000,000 and a $50,000,000 bond issue is being considered. Various counties in Tennessee will expend $1,500,000 from bond issues. Over $1,500,000 will be expended from bond issues in various counties in Texas. In Virginia $2,500,000 has been authorized by various counties, to be expended this year, while over $250,000 has been appropriated in Wisconsin.

The prospect for a complete system of public roads throughout the United States is better now than ever before, and a uniformity of good roads laws gives promise that this country will eventually take the place with France in having the most sensible system of road supervision and maintenance.

Ancient Rome's Libraries.

The libraries of ancient Rome were immense and splendid. Lucullus, whose name is associated with table luxuries, expended much of his wealth on books. His library, says Plutarch, had "walks, galleries and cabinets open to all visitors." Julius Caesar proposed to open this library definitely to the public.

How were these vast libraries, in addition to the book shops, filled? With his trained staff of readers and transcribers, a publisher could turn out an edition of any work at very cheap rates, and almost at a moment's notice. There was no initial expense of typesetting before a single copy could be produced, no ruinous extras in the shape of printers' corrections. The manuscript came from the author; the publisher handed it over to his slaves, and if a book of modest dimensions, the complete edition could be ready, if necessary, within twenty-four hours. Actually, then, books were produced and sold more easily and quickly in ancient Rome than they are in modern London.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

The "Iliad" Not a Myth.

The fall of Troy after a ten year siege by the Grecian princes about 1184 B. C. has long been considered as a rather mythical foundation for Homer's immortal epic, the "Iliad." But in 1876 the excavations of Schliemann on the reputed site of Troy brought to light under the ashes of two superincumbent fortress cities the remains answering to the descriptions of Homer and a hidden vault containing goblets, bowls, vases, gems, jewels, armors of lux and like articles in gold, silver and bronze. These treasures are now generally acknowledged to be the veritable remains of the once rich city of Priam, which, although depleted by ten years of costly warfare in the purchase of supplies and mercenaries and the final sack of the ruined city, were thus preserved to enrich the museums of Europe and greatly increase our realization of the wealth and art of that ancient Ilum, which we have hitherto been disposed to consider a poet's dream.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

Mark Antony's Mistake.

At a performance of "Julius Caesar" at Hurst college, England, Mark Antony made a mistake when the dead body of Caesar was brought in. He apostrophized the fallen hero with impassioned eloquence, and the audience felt acutely for the poor citizens, who were all presumably horror struck and overcome with grief, when Antony gently, but firmly, grasped, as he thought, the face cloth and slowly, very slowly, began to draw it back. Just then an excited whisper came from the other end of the corpse, "This end, you fool!" But Antony was inexorably wrapped in grief. He persevered and disclosed to the intently gazing audience Julius Caesar's boots.

A Compstent School Official.

There was a quarrel among the school board men once in an Essex town, and an official from London was sent down to settle it. The official gathered the board about him. He said he would hear the chairman first. "What, Mr. Chairman," he began, "was the cause of this quarrel?" "Well, ye see, sir," said the chairman, "we had an argument over spelling, and I wrote to—"

"You're a liar," broke in another board man. "You can't write!"

The Mandarin's Robe.

The author of "Recollections of a Society Clairvoyant" tells of the case of a lady who was haunted by reason of a garment she wore. It was a mandarin's robe from China, stated to be part of the loot from the sack of Peking. The owner, who lived in a flat in a London suburb, first began to be troubled by "a sense of decomposition in her bedroom" and heard "sneaky footsteps padding along the way passage to and out of the sitting room." She changed her house, but the obsession continued. The dreadful smell returned, her cats died in great agony from some unknown cause, and uncanny footsteps were heard at night. According to the clairvoyant's diagnosis, the robe had belonged to "a man who had worn it when he engaged in the mystic forms of ceremonial magic known to the Chinese. He had met with a violent death, and certain malignant forces were still imprisoned in his robe, which, from the bloodstains on it, he must have been wearing when he was killed." The curse was eventually dispelled by the robe being burned.

Ruskin and the Champion Bore.

One of the principal clubs in Pall Mall has the misfortune to be frequented by a gentleman who is by common consent the greatest bore and buttonholer in London. Some years ago this good man, on his return from his autumn holiday, was telling all his acquaintances at the club that he had been occupying a house at the lakes not far from Mr. Ruskin, who, he added, was in a very melancholy state.

"I am truly sorry for that," said one of his hearers. "What is the matter with him?"

"Well," replied the buttonholer, "I was walking one day in the lane which separated Ruskin's house from mine, and I saw him coming down the lane toward me. The moment he caught sight of me he darted into a wood which was close by and hid behind a tree till I had passed. Oh, very sad indeed!"—From "Collections and Recollections."

Clean Your Glasses.

The most scientifically fitted glasses in the world will do more harm than good unless they are properly kept and correctly worn. It is a strong statement to make, but most people wear dirty glasses, even those who are fastidiously careful in all other respects. Peering through any clouded and uncertain window is a strain upon the vision. How much more must the strain be when the window is so close to the eye that it is almost a part of it! Glasses must be worn at the exact angle for which they were prescribed and no other. For this reason many people and all children do better in spectacles than in eyeglasses. The glasses should be fitted to the eye by the optician, after which care should be taken not to handle and loosen the frame. If this occurs in the slightest degree they should again be fitted and tightened.—Youth's Companion.

A Mountain In the Sky.

Somewhere many miles away from this earth an enormous mountain twenty miles high is flying through space. The mountain is known astronomically as the planet Eros. The ordinary man has long taken it for granted that all the planets are more or less round in shape. The small planet Eros, however, is an exception to this rule. According to the latest astronomical information, it is a mere mountain in space, "without form and void," and as it turns upon its axis first one corner and then another is presented to view. These small worlds (few are over ten or twenty miles across) are not large enough to have sufficient gravity to draw their structure into symmetry and remain as when launched into space—mammoth meteorites. A tantalizing fact for astronomers is that Eros passed very close to us about Jan. 24, 1894—before the planet was recognized—and that quite so near an approach is not due again till 1975.

Seeing Is Doubting.

"Seeing is believing, eh?" said an oculist. "Well, no saw was ever more absurd than that. You see a horse's head and a four barrel, and you believe the barrel is longer than the horse's head, don't you? Well, it isn't. The horse's head from the tips of his ears to the end of his nose is longer than the barrel by a considerable distance. Architects have to deceive the eye in order to make it appear that their buildings are symmetrical. They make walls lean in that they may appear vertical. They make columns thicker in the middle than at the summit or base. And the top lines of a building, in order to appear plumb to the silly eye of man, must be raised up quite a lot in the center.

"Seeing is believing, indeed!"—Clannad Enquirer.

Apple Pie Without Apples.

A guest at an old fashioned home dinner was enquiring about apple pie and her hostess when another guest, who had been a California pioneer, recalled the "apple" pie given the children of 1852 to appease their homesick cravings when apples were a dollar a pound. It was made by breaking four soda crackers into an earthen bowl and pouring over them a pint of cold water rendered very tart by citric acid. When soft, the crackers were laid on a pie plate on the undercrust. Over them were sifted two table-spoonfuls of light brown sugar and a little allspice and cinnamon. A pretty perforated top crust was added, and in a few minutes a perfect apple pie was taken from the oven to delight young and old.—New York Sun.

Care With Mushrooms.

It is not generally known that mushrooms on account of the amount of nitrogen they contain approach nearer to animal food than many other vegetable products. An analysis made by Professor Atwood shows that mushrooms contain 3.5 per cent proteids, 1.6 per cent potatoes 2.5 and onions 1.6. Experts say that mushrooms should be eaten perfectly fresh and never eaten after repeating or being "warmed over." One of the extensive mushroom farmers in England says that persons subject to rheumatic and gouty attacks should abstain from mushrooms and that liquor should not be drunk at a meal where mushrooms are served.—New York World.

BASEBALL SIGNS.

Their Importance Is Much Greater Than Their Number.

Among the players we do not use the word "signal." With us it is a "sign." There are not as many "signs" used on a ball club as the public would believe. Of course the catcher must "sign" the pitcher for every ball that he throws. That is to prevent confusion or, as we say, to keep from "crossing each other." The catcher has a sign for a curve ball, a fast ball and a slow one.

To ball players all curve balls, such as the drop and the outcurve, are called "a curve." The catcher gives the same sign for any one of them. We do not call a ball that jumps "in" a curve. Ball players do not recognize the incurve. That is called a fast ball. Any ball thrown by a right handed pitcher with sufficient speed will jump inward to a slight degree. The outcurve and drop are unnatural curves, and the ball must be spun in an unnatural manner to get that peculiar "break."

The only other "sign" of importance is the one the batter gives to the runner when he intends to hit the ball. If he wants the runner to start as he swings (the hit and run play) he gives him a certain sign. There are any number of signs used for this play. Sometimes the batter gives it by rubbing his hand over the small end of the bat. Again, he may give it by knocking the dust from his shoes with the big end of the bat.—John J. McGraw in Metropolitan Magazine.

EAST INDIAN RUNNERS.

Kahars Who Can Regularly Make a Hundred Miles a Day.

Ordinary Marathon races seem rather insignificant compared with the regular performances of a certain east Indian caste. These Kahars, also known as Jhinwarb, live in the Punjab, where for centuries they have acted as runners, fishermen and water fowl catchers.

The men are trained runners and are said to be able to go a hundred miles a day without resting. According to Ball's Magazine, there is a well authenticated instance that Tika Ram, the son of Lalu Ram, carried dispatches 300 miles in three days—from Meerut to Meerut.

The point discussed, however, is whether the normal exertions of the Kahar post runners and the similar exertions of jirikisha men shortened their lives, and it appears that the Kahars, trained from childhood to be distance runners, live to be old men. They are not only able to withstand the strain of running great distances under a heavy load, but thrive under it.

The jirikisha man, too, notwithstanding his irregular diet, excessive use of liquor and exposure to the elements, lives to a reasonable age. In Tokyo when a census was taken of the jirikisha men a few years ago there were found to be more than 1,800 who were over fifty-five years of age.

Sailing Is So Interesting.

The lady was reading a nautical novel. She struggled along bravely for a few minutes, but finally had to appeal to her husband.

"Gerald," she said, "the author says that the boat was sailing 'wing and wing.' What does that mean? I've been on a yacht, but I never heard that before."

"That means," answered Gerald, rejoicing in the fact that he, too, had spent several hours on a sailing vessel—"that means that the schooner had her mains'l out to port and her fores'l out to starboard, or vice versa."

"Oh, I see," cried the lady. "It's just like a chicken—a wing on each side. And now I understand why they call those little sails in the middle 'jibs.' It's short for 'jiblets,' of course. Isn't sailing interesting?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ancient Architecture.

Herr Knauth, the architect in charge of the Cathedral of Strassburg, has shown that the principles of construction followed by the great cathedral builders of former times are identical with those used by the builders of the Egyptian pyramids and are based on triangulation. The same simple geometrical figure underlies all these constructions. More than this, Herr Knauth traces the architectural principle in the formation of crystals and lays down this formula: "The laws of proportion in mediæval architecture are the geometrical laws of crystallization."

Cause of the Delay.

"Why is your friend staying so long in New York?"

"I don't know—haven't heard which of the two reasons is keeping him."

"Which of the two?"

"Yes, whether he is having too good a time to come away or has spent all his money and can't get away."—Buffalo Express.

Life, upon the whole, is far more pleasurable than painful; otherwise, we would not feel pain so impatiently when it comes.—Lafayette Hunt.

First Flying Ambulances.

A valued servant and friend of the great Napoleon, Dominique Larrey, first established that system of "flying ambulances," which carried the wounded to the rear almost as soon as disabled. The staff numbered about 840 men with four heavy and twelve light two and four wheeled ambulances to each division. Napoleon reviewed this arm of the service with the greatest interest and once exclaimed to Larrey: "Your work is one of the most important conceptions of our age. It will suffice for your reputation." For the Egyptian campaign Larrey secured the services of 800 qualified surgeons in addition to the regular force. At Alexandria General Eguieres was severely wounded, and on his recovery wished to present Napoleon with a splendid Damascus saber. "Yes," said the emperor, "I accept in order to give it the surgeon in chief, by whose exertions your life has been spared." This saber, engraved with the words "Aboukir" and "Larrey," was taken from the great surgeon by the Prussians at Waterloo.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

The Horrors of Thirst.

In the oasis of Mogara, says L. Dow Corbington in the Wide World Magazine, we had a first experience of the desert traveler's great enemy—thirst. We were seated in front of a Bedouin chief's tent, our two baby camels enjoying their first drink of water since they had left Cairo, when, from across a sand dune, a Bedouin came staggering and tottering toward us. His eyes were bloodshot, his lips twice their natural size, while his tongue, blue and dry, hung out of his mouth. Evidently he had lost himself, had wandered around for days in search of water and had stumbled upon the oasis in the very nick of time. To allow him to drink would have been his death. In spite of his frantic struggles, he was held by four men, while a fifth allowed a few drops of water to trickle down his throat. It was as though he were a red-hot boiler which would have to be allowed to cool off before being filled if an accident was to be avoided.

Objected to Publicity.

Old Brother Brown had been approached several times by the colored deacons of his church and asked to pay his church dues. He had promised to "pay up" just as soon as he sold a calf which he owned. Several months later he sold the calf. The next Sunday morning at service the congregation sang the old familiar hymn:

The half has never been told
Of life so full and free.

Brother Brown, somewhat deaf and conscious of his failure to pay his dues, understood the words to be:

The calf has never been sold,
But when it's sold he'll pay.

When the hymn was finished the old colored man, very indignant, arose and said:

"Brethren and sistahs, I has sold dat calf and he's yo' ten dollars! But I didn't ca' about de whole church singin' about it."—National Monthly.

A Costly Tuft of Feathers.

On the apex of the crown worn by the Prince of Wales on special occasions is a curious feather, or, rather, tuft of feathers, the top of which is adorned with a gold thread. The value of this feather is estimated at $50,000, and it has the distinction of being the only one of its kind in human possession. Twenty years passed after the first hunter set out to procure the feather before it was attained, and during that period more than a dozen hunters had lost their lives in the quest. The costly tuft is of periwak feathers, and the extraordinary danger incurred in procuring it was due to the fact that the periwak, for some unknown reason, is to be found only in dense jungles in which tigers make their lair.—Chicago Tribune.

Turning the Turtle.

Turtle hunting is not without excitement. The method of capture consists of the simple act of turning the turtle on its back. Once in this position it is quite helpless. Its only defense is to cover its cap with sand thrown up by the powerful front legs or flippers. These are brought into action in an instant and woe betide the captor who has his eyes and mouth open at the moment, for the sand is buried with great force. When turned over the captive is dragged up the beach to above high water mark, and this is no easy task, for it weighs about four hundredweight.

Premeditated.

"And why do you claim that it was with malice aforethought that the automobile defendant ran down the complainant?"

Shopping For a Railroad.

Strict economy in buying is the only qualification that can insure a position as shopper for a railroad.

"The woman who can be talked into paying a cent more a yard for cotton or woolen goods than is absolutely necessary need never apply for the job," said a woman who holds a railroad job. "It is my business to buy clothes for people who have been injured on our road. Pending recovery the road pays all expenses, and when patients are ready to leave the hospital they are provided with a complete set of clothing, even to rubber overshoes. Unless the patients are unreasonable in their demands we provide the kind of clothes they ask for, and no doubt many of them leave the hospital better dressed than they have ever been in their lives. Since those outfits have to be duplicated a good many times in the course of the year it is obvious that needless extravagance cannot be tolerated. The railroad insists upon purchasing all supplies, and it is imperative that the woman who does the buying knows to a thread the kind of material she wants and what she ought to pay for it."—New York Sun.

Toothless Saws.

Toothless saws have been in use cutting armor plate for a number of years. The theory of the action is abrasion by local fusion, due to the very high speed of the disk, causing so many thousand inches of surface to impinge on the metal undercut that the material acted upon is heated at the point of contact to a temperature approaching, if not equal to, the fusing point. It appears as if a very small portion of the metal being cut immediately in the neighborhood of the point of contact is first melted and at once rubbed off, thus exposing a fresh surface to the frictional action, and that this process goes on continuously while the disk is working. The temperature of the disk must necessarily be much lower than the work in contact with it, owing to its large surface area, and when it is considered that all the frictional energy of the rotating disk is concentrated on an extremely small area of contact in the material subjected to its action the results obtained are not so surprising as appear at first sight.—Thomas R. Shaw in Cassier's Magazine.

Home Only in Name.

A young teacher who has substituted in the lower districts of the city tells this little story of one of her pupils:

"There had been an entertainment at the school at which the child had received a picture from the principal. The next day the little girl appeared with the picture under her arm. Quite regretfully she laid it upon the teacher's desk.

"Mom says thank you for the picture," she imparted, drawing up her ragged little form, "but we ain't got no wall to hang it on."

"No wall!" cried the horrified young substitute. "Why, Molly, what do you mean?"

"There's five families of us in our room," Molly explained carelessly, "and we live in the middle."—Philadelphia Times.

The Bloodletting Branch.

Not every pun is as good as one credited to a Dublin gentleman of long ago by the author of a book entitled "In Many Lands." George IV., on his visit to Dublin in 1821, met at a reception Sir Philip Crampton, Ireland's greatest surgeon.

"In what branch of the service is that magnificent looking man?" asked his majesty.

"The gentleman to whom the question was put was too polite to hint that the king was mistaken in supposing that the distinguished surgeon was a naval or military officer.

"Sir," he replied, "he is a general in the lancets."

AN ILL MATED PAIR.

Wide Apart in Temperament Were Thomas and Jane Carlyle.

That the Carlyles were an ill assorted couple no one could deny. She was a highly strung, nervous woman, very quick, able and impatient, disappointed with her married life and her position, jealous of the admiration which Carlyle received at the hands of all his admirers, especially of one or two women, whom she found very unsympathetic.

That Carlyle adored her there is little doubt. He loved her with all the rough, passionate power of his nature, but he was a peasant in manner and character and lacking in all the little outward signs of devotion and affection which so many women exact and the absence of which they resent most bitterly.

Mrs. Carlyle found herself tied to an irritable genius who, sensitive at every point, deeply devoted to her, but absolutely incapable of translating that love into the language which she craved and longed for. I remember her once saying to me in a bitter way, "My dear, whatever you do, never marry a philosopher," and that was the key to the enigma—the woman always hungering for proofs of the devotion in which the whole of her daily life was wanting.—From Lady St. Heller's "Memories."

Physiognomy Not Reliable.

I am a profound disbeliever in physiognomy. Features are false witnesses. Stupidity frequently wears a mask of intelligence. I know business men who look like poets and poets who look like business men. Men of genius invariably look like idiots, and if you pick out the man who looks most eminent in a party you are sure to find he is a nobody. I always distrust men who look magnificent. Nature is a stingy creature. She seldom gives a man the double gift of being great and looking great. She took care to lame Byron and deform Pope and disfigure Johnson. But the crowning example of her jealous parsimony is Shakespeare. I have always been disappointed with Shakespeare's face. It does not live up to his poetry. It is dull, heavy and commonplace.

the fifth, Byland called him safe. Protests were raised by the Lawrenceville team at the unwarranted decision.

There's certainly something doing. "Scissors" McIlvaine batted at 500 per cent on Saturday. One of his hits was a double.

"Ling" Moffat, well known in college circles and minor leagues was stationed on second for the Lawrenceville team on Saturday.

Longo, Lawrenceville's crack shortstop, is a full blooded Indian.

Brown of the Lawrenceville team is one of the headiest captains that has visited Charleroi for some time.

Charlie Mason is stopping everything that comes his way on first. That Mason family sure contains some ball players.

Quaker Doctor in New Office

On McKean Avenue Between 5th and 6th Streets
Opposite Hotel Arthur

The Quaker Doctor is now located in his new offices on McKean avenue between Fifth and Sixth streets, directly opposite the Hotel Arthur and next door to where he is giving his free lectures and performances nightly.

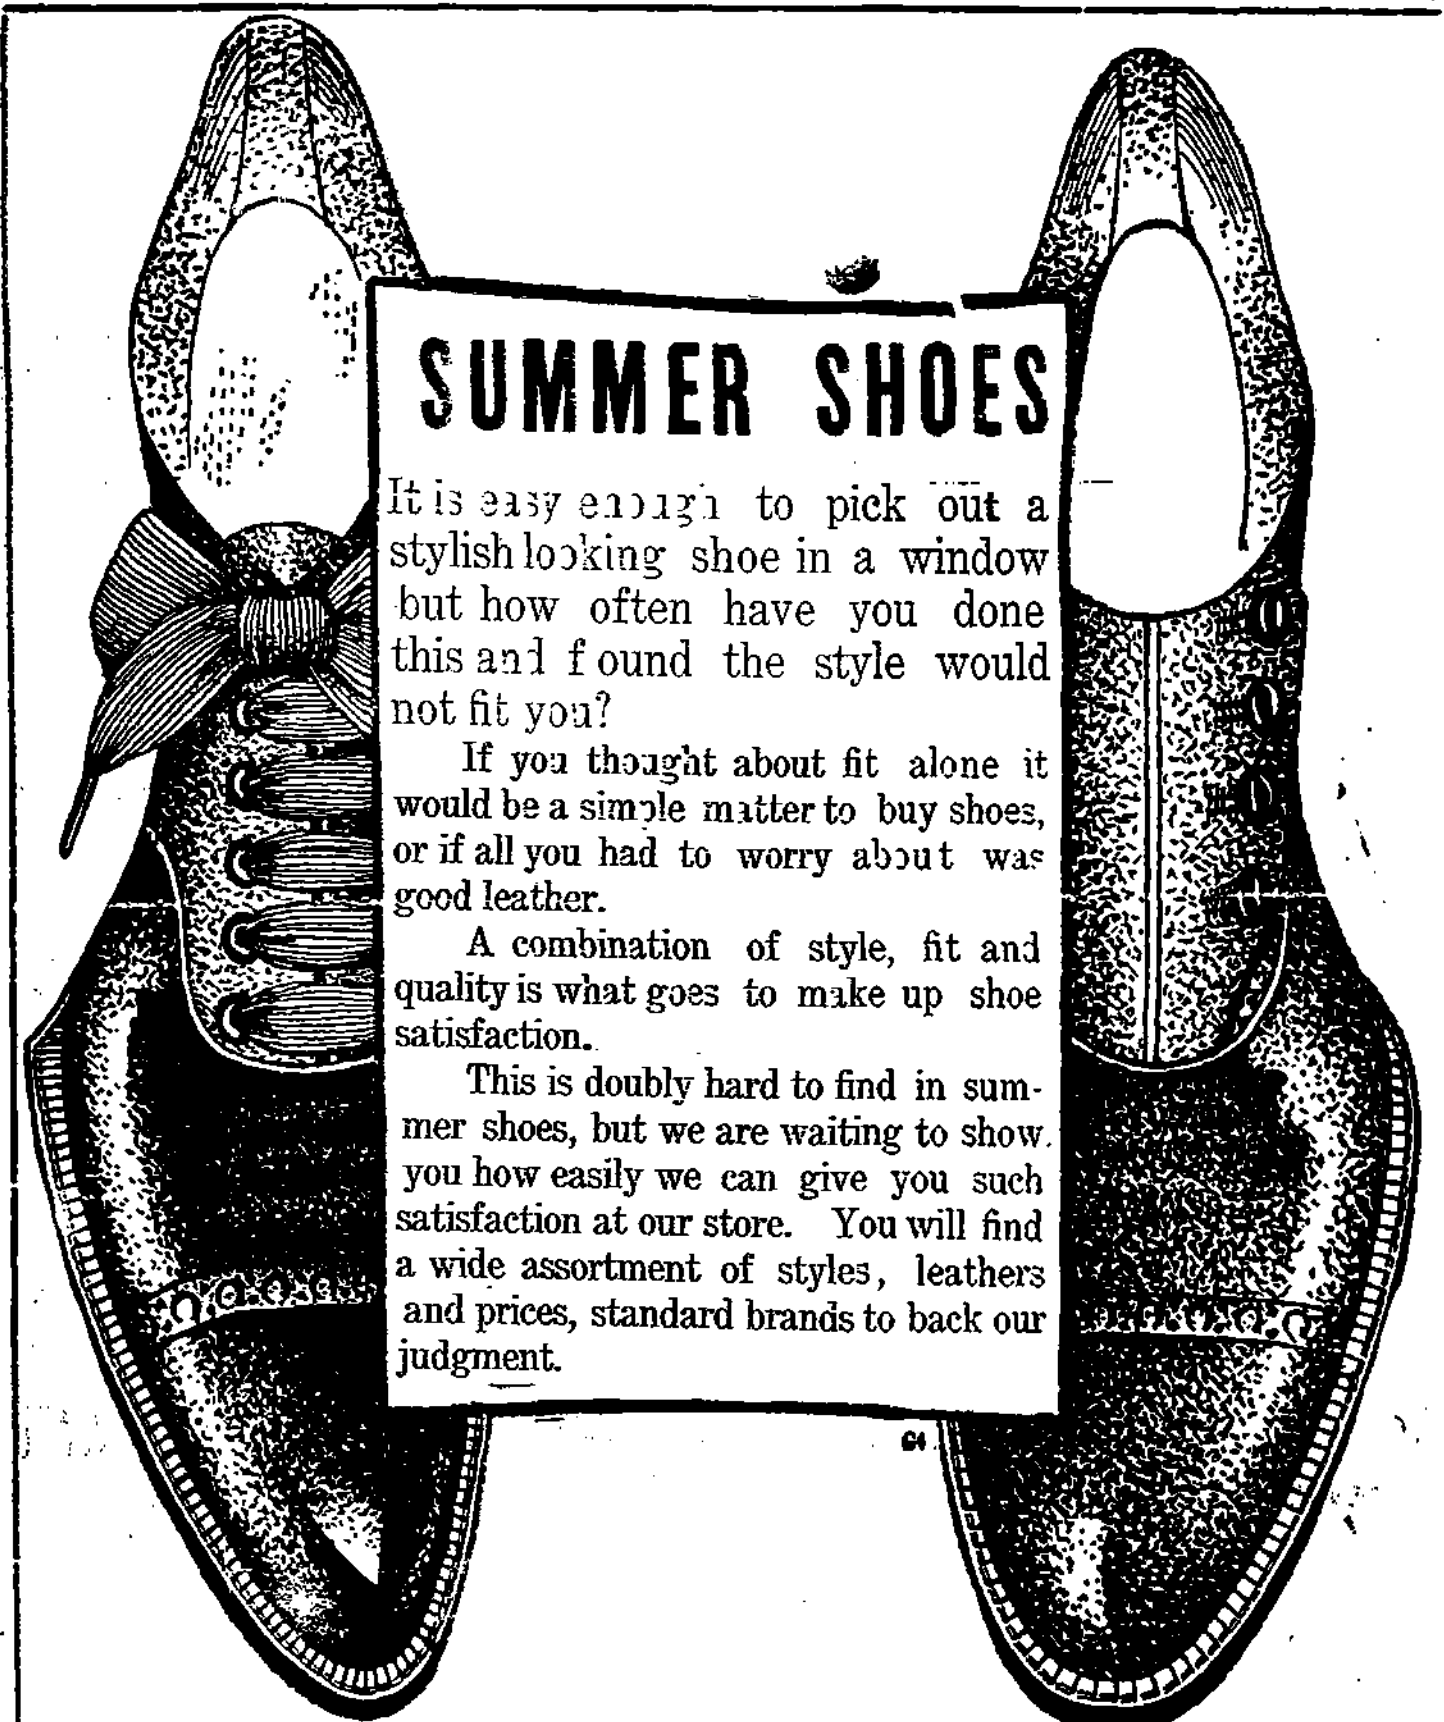

On account of the delay in getting his office opened here in Charleroi, he gave two hours yesterday morning to working men and many of the holders of the consultation cards took advantage of this to call and get examination and advice from him without losing any time from their work. The Quaker says that Sundays with him is a day of rest as it is with most of us, but he is not sorry that he gave two hours yesterday for office work, and he could spare the time much easier than those to whom every hour means part of the weekly wage.

The Quaker says he has been received almost royally here and the enormous crowds that gather at lectures and free performances every night is the best proof in the world that people are recognizing the fact that everything connected with his exhibitions is moral and refined and worthy of patronage.

The shows which seem to improve with each performance are given by high class entertainers and without exaggeration, it is safe to say that they put to shame many that our people have paid fifty and seventy-five cents to see. Besides the various specialties he is giving one or more comedy acts now every night, and as a rule it is one continuous laugh from the time these acts start till they end.

He desires to state through these columns that every one calling at his office for consultation and advice must have one of the cards which are given out at the platform nightly with the remedies. He says if they did not have this rule, it would be utterly impossible to handle the crowds that would call at his office, among which would be a great many that would come merely out of idle curiosity and he wishes it understood his services are not for these, but for the sick and suffering that really need his services and the benefit of his years of active practice in medicine and surgery.
